With tens of thousands of companies using Microsoft's SharePoint on a daily basis, Content, Collaboration, and Social services has become the company's fastest growing service area. Organizations have adopted the online tool for document management, business process management, portal, collaboration, records management, search, and Web management, as well as social networking purposes. However, successfully managing all this structured and unstructured content requires a skilled approach for which Netwoven provides a specialized touch.

"Many companies have well-defined business processes that can be automated through SharePoint's App Model, but are not sure where to begin the migration process," said Agadi. "Netwoven has a great deal of expertise in leveraging SharePoint's execution engine to customize applications for very specific needs. We are excited to share our real-world experience with SharePoint Saturday's attendees and humbled to be selected as an expert in this field."

Titled, "Apps Strategy for Business and IT," attendees to Agadi's discussion will learn:

- How to prepare a business for a new custom SharePoint solution
- Key considerations for a SharePoint 2007/2010 FTS migration to an App Model

- Best practices, governance, cost and timeframes associated with an App Model migration
- IT readiness for App Model support
- Build and deploy techniques for developers
